Contents

Acknowledgments ix
Preface xi

PART ONE  Freedom reconsidered
1  The disappointment of liberalism 3
2  Rationale 6
3  Types of happiness 10
4  Freedom and happiness 15
5  Types of liberty 19
6  Inner freedom 25
7  Do we prefer what we choose? 29
8  Self-deception and akrasia 34
9  A digression on the ethic of consent 41
10  Exercising inner freedom 45
11  Subtle coercion 50
12  The decline of free will 54
13  From political philosophy to metaphysics 58

PART TWO  Philosophical foundations
14  The need for metaphysics 63
15  Consciousness and the subject 68
16  Phenomenon and noumenon 73
17  The ‘legislation for nature’ 77
18  Scientific thinking 83
19  Knowing and being 88
THE FREEDOM PARADOX

20 Instances of non-sensible intuition 91
21 The noumenon and the Self 97
22 A digression on the existence of God 103
23 On death 108

PART THREE  Towards a post-secular ethics

24 Modern moral anxiety 117
25 Moral relativism 122
26 Reconstructing a moral code 128
27 Rationalist ethics 133
28 Genuine philanthropy 141
29 The moral self 146
30 Emotions as judgments 153
31 Further thoughts 160
32 Avatars of virtue 166
33 Egoism and malice 170
34 Eternal justice 173

PART FOUR  Moral judge or moral adviser?

35 Becoming good 179
36 The theory in practice 186
37 Suicide 191
38 Sex 196
39 Nature 210

PART FIVE  Freedom rediscovered

40 The ground of inner freedom 217
41 Finding inner freedom 223
42 The individual and the collective 228
43 Aesthetics 231
44 Happiness reconsidered 239
45 The human condition 244

Notes 248
Index 267